Accessibility and accommodation at Brock University

Brock University prioritizes disability and accessibility as human rights issues that help shape an inclusive campus climate and guide compliance initiatives under the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act (AODA).

Using a framework of full accessibility, there are three main activities that the Human Rights and Equity (HRE) Office oversees:

- Compliance with the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act and the removal of barriers to full participation throughout the Brock Community.
- Education and training to the Brock community about accessibility, inclusion and anti-ableism through a human rights lens.
- Confidential consultations and complaint resolutions processes regarding individual issues or concerns around accessibility and accommodation.

HRE also typically assists with:

- Questions about discrimination and harassment on the basis of disability and other protected grounds, particularly with regard to accessibility and accommodation.
- Information about accessibility legislation and accommodation obligations in Ontario.
- University projects, activities or research that affect the community.
- Drop-ins from individuals who are interested in disability as a human rights issue.
