

Portuguese Cultural Heritage in the South of China: Is there a
Lusophone Macau?

25 Sept. 2015

Sankey Chambers -11:00am – 12:30pm

Dr. Rogerio Puga

Universidade Nova of Lisbon- Portugal

Looking at the role and importance of Macau since the sixteenth century, as well as its semi-colonial status, I will review both the diaspora as a Macanese identity trait and the Portuguese cultural heritage in Macau, as well as its strategic use by the Chinese administration to place Macau in the Lusophone network of interests, asking the (provocative) question: “Is there a Lusophone Macao”?

Rogerio Miguel Puga is Assistant Professor at the New University of Lisbon. He holds a PhD on Anglo-Portuguese Studies (2007), and was Assistant Professor at the University of Macau (2007-2009). Some recent publications include: Imagologia e Mitos Nacionais, O Episódio dos Doze de Inglaterra na Literatura Portuguesa (c.1550-1902) e o Nacionalismo (Colonial) de Teófilo Braga (2014); The British Presence in Macau, 1637-1793 (2013); Chronology of Portuguese Literature, 1128-2000 (2011); A World of Euphemism: Representations of Macao in the Work of Austin Coates: City of Broken Promises as Historical Novel and Female Bildungsroman (2009), and A Presença Inglesa e as Relações Anglo-Portuguesas em Macau (1635-1794) (2009).