

Chancellor's Chair in Teaching Excellence

Student stories of the service learning experience

Erin Sharpe
Applied Health Sciences

The project aims to expand our understanding of the student experience in service learning, with particular attention being given to understanding the ways that students make sense of the ethical complexities and moral ambiguities they encounter in the context of serving. The project will create a data set of student stories about their service learning experiences and will be analyzed for what they tell us about the ways that students perpetuate, resist or transform the power relations they encounter in the context of service learning.