Aaliyah Ariella
Brock University Students' Union President

Aaliyah Ariella is a Brock University psychology student and emerging community leader with a strong interest in health care, student advocacy, nonprofit work, and community service. She is the Founder and President of Camellia Delivers, a developing not-for-profit initiative focused on supporting unhoused individuals through essential resources, care packages, outreach, and community partnerships.

Currently, Aaliyah is building the foundation of Camellia Delivers, including its outreach goals, volunteer structure, community partnerships, and future programming. Through this work, she is developing experience in nonprofit leadership, organizational planning, advocacy, and community engagement.

In addition to her work with Camellia Delivers, Aaliyah has been involved in several committees and external volunteer opportunities, where she has strengthened her skills in collaboration, communication, leadership, and service. These experiences have shaped her commitment to creating inclusive spaces, improving access to support, and helping individuals feel represented within their communities.

Aaliyah's academic background in psychology, combined with her goal of pursuing a future in health care, informs her compassionate and people-centered approach to leadership. She is passionate about connecting individuals with resources, creating meaningful opportunities for students to get involved, and contributing to initiatives that have a tangible impact on the broader community.

AYANSO, Anteneh

Anteneh Ayanso is Professor of Information Systems in the Goodman School of Business at Brock University. Born and raised in Ethiopia, Anteneh obtained a Bachelor of Arts (BA) degree in Business Management from Addis Ababa University in Ethiopia. He started his career at the same institution and taught several business courses before he left for the United States with a Fulbright Scholarship to study MBA at Syracuse University. Anteneh also holds PhD in Information Systems from the University of Connecticut where he also taught information systems and operations management courses.

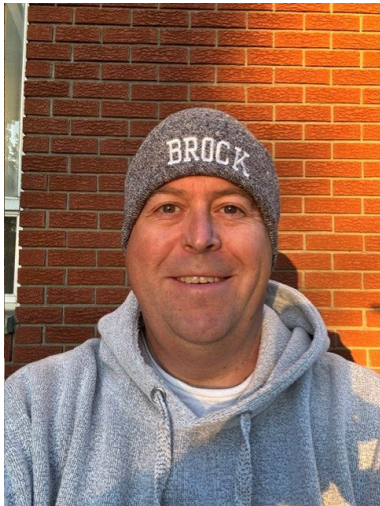

Since joining Brock University, Anteneh has been instrumental in launching programs and research collaborations in data science and analytics. He is the founding director of the Centre for Business Analytics, and co-proponent and inaugural director of the BSc in Data Sciences and Analytics program at Brock University. He is a member of a trans-disciplinary team of scholars from Brock University for Niagara Prosperity Initiative (NPI) Evaluation. He regularly participates as a panelist, moderator, speaker and instructor at various management seminars and industry summits in data analytics. Anteneh also served as Chair of the Department of Finance, Operations, and Information Systems, in addition to his regular roles as Member at Large in various Senate Committees and other university committees.

At Goodman, Anteneh teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in data management, business analytics, and management of information systems. He has published extensively and supervised many students with research programs funded by internal and external grants, including NSERC, SSHRC, Ontario Centres of Excellence (OCE) and MITACS. He is a recipient of several teaching and research awards from Goodman, and a member of Beta Gamma Sigma and Phi Beta Delta. Very active in the academic community, Anteneh also serves as Senior Editor, Associate Editor, Editorial Board Member and peer-reviewer of many academic journals, as well as examiner and assessor for research grants, graduate theses and academic programs.

Anteneh resides in St. Catharines with his wife and two children and serves as the founding President of the Ethio-Canadian Community Association in the Niagara Region. A big fan of soccer, he enjoys playing pick-up soccer with various groups of the community in the Niagara Region.
